Malta is the latest state in the Union to go "red." Maine turned down prohibition by a two to one vote. The trend throughout the U. S. is definitely toward re-legalized liquor control and away from prohibition. It will not be many months before new liquor legislation will be enacted in the U. S.

Both trade imports and exports to Great Britain were substantially higher during July and August than for the same period last year. Unemployment is also on the increase in the Old Country. These are encouraging signs, and indicate a normal, healthy trade growth. Improvement of this kind is better than artificial bolstering of business like the American N.R.A., which bears some resemblance to a "shot in the arm." The N.R.A. may have its good points. It can tide things over until there is a natural trade recovery. I still have don some good.

The work of Dr. B. E. Barlow is wearing ring neck pheasants in reports of praise. Sportsmen here that these birds are thriving in this country, and if given a good start this will become their natural habitat. The Hungarian partridge was introduced a few years ago, and now there are scores of thousands of them, providing great sport for hunters in the fall. It is hoped to do the same thing with the ring neck pheasants.

The Board of Trade meeting last Wednesday was a failure through poor attendance. Only fifteen members are required for a quorum, and Wednesday's attendance was fourteen. Things like this will happen occasionally, but if it becomes too frequent the board will die of starvation. The board of trade has accomplished a lot of good work in the past, and there is much work yet to be done. Here is a public body which has every reason to continue its existence.

ALBERTA POOL MAKES 35 CENT INITIAL PAYMENT
CALGARY, Sept. 13—We have been accepting wheat on the basis of a 35 cent initial payment," an official of the Alberta Wheat Pool stated today.

Effective Wednesday, the initial payment on wheat delivered to the 1933-34 pool operated by the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool will be 45 cents per bushel basis No. 1 Northern, Fort William.

PREMIER BENNETT MAY VISIT WESTERN CANADA
OTTAWA, Sept. 13—Hon. H. B. Bennett is likely to visit the west shortly, though definite plans have not yet been made. The visit would afford him the opportunity of consulting with the prairie governments and other interests concerning the new agreement for the reduction of wheat exports.

TENNIS NOTES
A number of local tennis enthusiasts plan on going to Milo next Sunday to play a friendly game there. E. Cully, of Milo, is sponsoring the event. The Milo club has a board court, and Bassano players will have their first experience in playing on a court of this kind. The Bassano Tennis Club is considering the holding of an elimination tournament next year, with open competition. The event would bring together players from Brooks, Gleichen, Milo, Bassano, and any other districts seeking to enter for the championships. This tournament would be held prior to the annual tournament for the Bow Valley inter-town tennis trophy, which is a Labor Day event.

HUNTING SEASON STARTS TODAY

Local hunters who could get away from their work were on the trail of ducks, geese, and partridge at 12 o'clock noon today, the opening of the hunting season.

Hungarian partridges are numerous. Ducks are fewer, but hunters who have been watching the birds and their haunts expect to bring in a good bag from the first day's shooting. A few geese have been seen wheeling overhead; the big gray herons will be more numerous later in the fall.

The duck disease which has killed off thousands of ducks in the Glenora and other districts has affected only a few birds in the Bassano district, according to reports. There are some dead birds seen at a few of the sloughs, but their number is not great.

Hunters are advised not to eat those ducks which seem light in weight, as they may have the disease.

GOING! GOING!

"Top off, half gone, all gone," of the fairy tale about the cat and the bowl of cream might be used to describe what is occurring with regard to diphtheria, at least in most enlightened communities. A few years ago it was proclaimed that diphtheria could be prevented; today we can say that diphtheria is being prevented and that, in a number of places, it has actually been banished.

This is one of the most remarkable achievements of our age. For centuries diphtheria was a menace to child life, taking a heavy toll after year after year. Then came diphtheria antitoxin, one of the great discoveries of the latter part of the past century. Antitoxin saves life; when it is given at the onset of the disease its use has preserved many thousands of lives.

In spite of the benefits of antitoxin, deaths continued to occur because, for one reason or another, there was delay in its use. Furthermore, antitoxin could not control the spread of diphtheria.

Then came the great discovery that, through the use of a new substance, diphtheria toxin, diphtheria could actually be prevented. This meant that children could actually be protected and that parents need no longer fear that their little ones would contract diphtheria. This prevention is not a theory. It is a well tried, practical method. Thousands of Canadian children have been immunized against diphtheria. They have received the necessary injections of toxin and, as a result, their bodies are capable of overcoming any diphtheria germs with which they may come in contact.

For parents the important points to know are, first, that it is only the children who have been immunized who are protected. Unless your child is one of these, your child is still being exposed to all the dangers of diphtheria.

The second point is that diphtheria occurs most commonly and is most fatal during the earliest years of life. This means that children should be immunized before they are one year old, so otherwise they may contract the disease. To delay means taking a chance for which there is no justification. To act promptly gives your child the protection to which he has a right, and ensures that he will pass through his early childhood unharmed by diphtheria. Do not delay; lose no time; act now! Questions concerning health, addressed to the Canadian Medical Association, 134 College St., Toronto, will be answered personally by letter.

DOROTHY NOTES

DOROTHY, Sept. 11—Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Thompson of Spokane, are visiting at the E. J. Harter home. Mr. Donald McKinney has been ill this week and is now in Bassano Hospital for treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Johnson were Calgary visitors Friday. The regular meeting of the Dorothy Ladies' Aid was held in the church Thursday, Sept. The weather not being favorable for harvest work the ladies invited their husbands to attend. They were all real workers and soon completed building a fence around the church lot. Lunch was served by Mrs. Fugh and all enjoyed it.

The many friends of Mrs. Roy Robson are pleased to know she is home again after her illness in Bassano Hospital.

Miss Gladys Thew and Harold nieke, of Calgary, visited with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Thew, over the week-end.

Mrs. E. A. Holland, Frances and Madeline, were visitors at the McKinnon home Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Wall spent Friday at East Coulee visiting at the Pink home.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. McKinney, Mr. H. Thew and Mrs. F. Thew motored to Bassano Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Nels Neelson were Calgary visitors Saturday.

The haughty Englishman was endeavoring to tell us the importance of his family upon his guide in the Highlands.

"My ancestors," he exclaimed, with a theatrical gesture, "there had at the right to bear arms for the last three hundred years."

STRIKERS IN THE UNITED STATES TOTAL 115,000

New York, Sept. 13—Approximately 115,000 American workers were on strike Wednesday in widely separated industrial centers. While the National Recovery administration worked toward peace, mediation boards struggled with warring capital and labor factions on many fronts.

The strikers included coal miners, garment workers, needle trades workers, retail workers, silk workers, shoe workers, and others. The chief trouble concerned the failure or delay of employers in signing up with the N. R. A.

Safety First

Two pickpockets were strolling along the street together.

Every now and then one of them would stop, take out his watch and look at it.

His companion began to get annoyed.

"I say, Jim," he said, "what's up with you? Why d'yer keep looking at your tucker? Ain't it going, or something?"

"I'm not looking at it to see the time," said the other; "I'm looking at it to make sure that it's still there."

CLINORE BARRY

FINAL INSTALLMENT

"Oh, Sam! Joy's misery shot her words through with pathos. "Well, anyway, he packed and four days after that, he was terribly sorry for Mr. Neil. That Miss Abbott seemed to come around as usual too. No one knew anything about you, but I guess a lot of gossip went the rounds. Then, just two days ago Rozie told me how she'd heard Miss Abbott telling Mr. Neil that she had seen you in San Francisco the day before that, she'd told you about Mr. Neil's mother dying, but you'd said you were sorry that you couldn't come back to him."

"Oh, Sam, did he believe her? You don't suppose he really believed her?"

"I dunno. It's hard for men to know what you want are palling but Rozie didn't. She said to me, 'Sam,' she said, 'I don't trust that Miss Abbott. I'd have to hear them words from Mrs. Packard. I don't believe I'd believe them, her having changed and go so nice lately, and all—' Sam paused in confusion.

"Go on, Sam," said Joyce, "it's all right."

"Well, so Rozie said to me that he was to go to San Francisco and not come back until I found you! So I came and doggone if I didn't find you the second day."

"So Rozie believed in me!" thought Joyce, deeply touched. And aloud she said, "Bless her! I always felt Rozie could be depended on!"

Suddenly she realized that there were more than half a dozen.

Half way home.

A job caught in her throat.

The house seemed deserted when they arrived, and Joyce, who had wasn't expecting him, found the door open and a note pinned to the wall.

It was from Mr. Neil, and it said: "I'm sorry I can't come home tonight, but I'll be there tomorrow night. Love, Neil."

Joyce read the note and then she looked at the clock. It was ten o'clock. She had time to get ready for bed.

She went to her room and she found a letter from Mr. Neil. It was the same letter she had found in the morning.

She read it and then she looked at the clock. It was eleven o'clock. She had time to get ready for bed.

been nursing herself for a reception by the gang," felt tremendously relieved. She wanted a little time before saying anyone, even the faithful Rozie for whom her heart was full of gratitude. She slipped quietly up to her bedroom, and stretched out on the bed, in tense silence.

What next? What next? She had never felt less mistress of the situation since she had found herself in Fritz Packard.

Gradually, as night drew on, she heard sounds downstairs, and, along with pangs of hunger, she realized somewhat and began to consider faintly Packard. She took a hasty bath, and dressed herself in one of the pretty frocks that still hung in her closet. It shocked her to notice how vain and haggard she looked; the life she had led in San Francisco had left its mark.

Sam was standing by the door as Joyce came down the wide stairs; he smiled at her with a return of the old friendliness, and then slipped out.

She was left facing her husband. All night of how she should meet this situation flashed when she saw Neil. Such an intensity of unhappiness, brooded over her face.

"What's the matter?" she asked, and without a moment's hesitation she ran toward him. Her was some one of whom she was genuinely fond, in the great trouble—she thought but to comfort him! He did not once lose his self-control, but the tragic look in his eyes lightened when he saw her, and his whole face lit up. "You're here!" he said, and he held her in his arms.

"I'm here," she said, and she looked at him. "I'm here," she said, and she looked at him.

him. She likewise did not want to tell him anything about her life in San Francisco during that time; it was so humiliating the reality of a bad dream, and she had no wish to revive the memories by talking about it. So she sat silently.

All at once she was aware that Neil was regarding her thoughtfully, with a brooding gaze unlike the matter-of-factness she remembered in him.

"Anything wrong, Neil?" she asked nervously.

"No, dear; I was just thinking how wonderful it was to have you back."

"Oh, Neil, you mustn't say things like that to me! I know it's only your kindness, your natural sweetness—"

"Joyce's voice choked up, and she left the table. Neil followed her into the living room.

"Well, we won't go into that just now, Fritz, if it bores you." Joyce was about to remonstrate with him for his misinterpretation of her words, when he went hastily on.

"By the way, I found something that'll probably interest you—a diary kept by you—by Fritz—beginning about the time of our arrival home in Manhattan after our marriage."

"Sure, I'll get it; just a minute." And he went rather wearily out of the room.

Joyce was worried at the change in Neil. He seemed to have lost all his enthusiasm, all his spirit. "I get first. Perhaps that horse, that curly browed Fire Queen. But it has a charming life—a charmed and a damned one. How is this thing going to end?"

And the last entry in the book, in sprawling, blotched characters: "I've been rotten over the baby of Sylvia's. Of course Neil wants it brought on here. But a child—why should I wreck a poor child's life as I am wrecking Neil's? It's better off where it is—let's a lost soul now."

"Neil," said Joyce at last, "Neil, doesn't it help to know that Fritz did care about you? She did love you."

"Neil did not reply to her question, and Joyce saw that he was trembling like a leaf. "Do you think—do you think, Joyce, that things might come out as mother hoped they would? Do you think you could feel that there was home? I shan't bother you much myself, but we might bring on Lawton's child, and do our best with it, between us."

"Oh, Neil, I feel as Fritz said, that in this crazy world it's something to know that loyalty like yours exists! Do you want me, now, knowing all this? It's been a sorry business, and it seems to me you've been the victim!"

"May I look at it with you?" he asked. "I didn't read much of it. Somehow it seemed—not quite right. I thought I'd put it away and read it with you—when you came home." He spoke so quietly that Joyce barely caught the words.

"Neil," she said impulsively, pausing before she opened the book. "I do feel at home here."

He smiled, a sudden sweet flash that warmed Joyce to the heart, and gravely they opened the diary between them.

It was nearly midnight when they laid the book aside. Fascinated, they had read every word of the handwriting that danced over its pages, and, fascinated, they had suffered with the curious, last spirit that had cried out her secret fears in her journal.

"Oh, Neil, it's so terrible!" cried Joyce. "I knew Fritz had a bad lot, but I never thought of her as suffering somehow—I never thought of her as doing all these things deliberately. In a sort of crazed effort to get back her identity—to remember!"

"Yes," said Neil. "I don't know much about these things, but I should think the medical might explain that second blow—the time you were thrown from Pire Queen—as a sort of mental or snapping, due to the pitch you'd worked yourself up to."

Fritz's diary filled in most of the gaps in the story that Neil had gradually pieced out that day for Joyce. From the scattered notes she learned that Fritz had been one of the best of her kind of snappers, due to the pitch you'd worked yourself up to."

that made a very deep impression on Joyce, "I know I did wrong to marry Neil Packard without telling him. He's too good a man to be treated so meanly, but I just could not tell him. I couldn't tell him. And I had to marry him—just again in a lifetime and I likely to meet a man so surely possessing that which can be depended on. In this crazy world it is something to know that loyalty of that sort can be secured."

As the diary went on the entries became more and more excited. "I'm cheating Neil!" Fritz cried. "He's got a right to a wife who's more than just a salt eating for the time being! I've got to get back my memory! Perhaps drink will do it. Bring on the wine cups!"

"I'll try them!"

"... Why do I take so much pleasure in shocking people around here? Maybe when I get back my memory I'll find I was a small-town school teacher, or somebody who had never had a chance to express herself! Well, I'm expressing myself all right these days! All I've got to do is think of something reckless and wild, to be seized with an insane desire to do it..."

And then, all at once, "Arthur Mattland—ugh, how I hate him! Why do I endure him around me? God knows! I flirt with him like a common street woman—yet I love Neil! Why do I do it? Sometimes I feel as if I try Neil's patience, to see how much he really will stand from me. There seems to be no limit to his affection!"

"... I've gone almost the limit and it's done good. What did I think it would do? God knows! I know—I can see from his face that he knows there's too much to that affair between Arthur Mattland and me. If he'd only knock me down—"

—a blow, they say a blow will bring back one's memory. But Neil won't—he never will! I'll have to kill myself first. Perhaps that horse, that curly browed Fire Queen. But it has a charming life—a charmed and a damned one. How is this thing going to end?"

And the last entry in the book, in sprawling, blotched characters: "I've been rotten over the baby of Sylvia's. Of course Neil wants it brought on here. But a child—why should I wreck a poor child's life as I am wrecking Neil's? It's better off where it is—let's a lost soul now."

"Oh, Neil, it's so terrible!" cried Joyce. "I knew Fritz had a bad lot, but I never thought of her as suffering somehow—I never thought of her as doing all these things deliberately. In a sort of crazed effort to get back her identity—to remember!"

"Yes," said Neil. "I don't know much about these things, but I should think the medical might explain that second blow—the time you were thrown from Pire Queen—as a sort of mental or snapping, due to the pitch you'd worked yourself up to."

Fritz's diary filled in most of the gaps in the story that Neil had gradually pieced out that day for Joyce. From the scattered notes she learned that Fritz had been one of the best of her kind of snappers, due to the pitch you'd worked yourself up to."

SECURITY AND PROTECTION

Grain growers, the length and breadth of Alberta, should keep in mind that a fair measure of protection and security in the sale and handling of their grain can be obtained through the building up of a strong elevator system on a strictly grower-controlled, co-operative basis. Having this in mind the best course to follow is to well—what about this Alansworth? "Alansworth—Robert Alansworth!" Joyce suddenly had an idea. "Neil," she said, "I think I see now what Robert Alansworth felt that day! I think he must have felt ashamed of his part in the whole affair—I think he must have seen it all, have realized that a splendid person like you were, and have felt that he simply couldn't run off with your wife!"

Neil looked at her sideways. "It sounds like the bank to me. What on earth makes you think that?"

"Well, you see, Neil, I never saw that that day in the woods, and you remember he behaved so queerly, rejecting me by his silence! Joyce had to swallow hard to keep back the emotion that surged over her at the memory, but she went on quickly.

"I'd always felt so sure that he was an exalted being, somebody other than the rest of the world, and for him to turn into—into just a cad seemed all wrong. I'd rather be able to think of him without bitterness, and I do feel sure I'm right, that he simply couldn't bring himself to take your wife away..."

"Neil smiled. "All right with me darling, but I don't think anything you guess anything you guess as long as you don't think of him

JAPAN WANTS LARGER NAVY
TOKIO, Sept. 13—Navy Minister Mison Osumi told the United Press in an exclusive interview today that Japan will demand a naval ratio more nearly approximating that of Great Britain and the United States at the next international naval conference.

International observers saw in his flat statement a possibility of unlimited naval competition after the London naval treaty expires in 1935, unless Japan's demand is met in a new treaty.
